East Tennessee Recent reports represent Longetreet as having been re-inferced by the way of Kingston. This is highly improbable, although there may be indications of still further assistance to Longstreet.

That the rebel bordes still persist is elinging to East Tennessee, hanging or the skirts of Knoxville itself, notwith standing their present need of troops be fore Bichmond, and in front of Grant, shows how desperately they are at work te retake that region. Jeff. Davis himself is on record that East Tennessee must be re-esptured, and there have been constant intimations from the robel press. and from descrious, the rebel army contemplated taking the initia tive in the spring campaign, by a raid into Pennsylvania, and upon General Grant's communications. How far they may be discenceried by the bold movements of Grant and Sherman, remains to be determined. Notwithstanding Sherman has already penetrated the cotton States almost to the Alabama State line, there is no in dication of a withdrawal of Longstreet's troops from East Tennessee, but rather the contrary. Soldiers who are home on furlough and who have traversed the entire length of that region, declare it to be of immense value to the rebels. The fine farming and forsging valley of the Holstein should not be permanently held by the rebels. We hope to see some movemen soon which will look forward to the expulsion of Longstreet and his bare-footed and ragged followers, from East Tennesseo.
